Army Doctor to Stick to Chute

Believes There Is Future in Aerial Rescue Work; Had Thrills in War.

GREAT FALLS, MONT. — Capt. Amos Little is a little guy with big ideas about the future. He's a 5-foot, 4-inch parachuting doctor, who thinks there is a future in aerial rescue work, says the Associated Press.

After 47 rescue leaps—most of them in the rugged mountains of Montana, Wyoming and Colorado—the 29-year-old army doctor says: "When I get out of this man's army, I plan to take a couple of years' residence in orthopedics, settle in this Northwest country, build up a private practice and continue with aerial rescue work."

"There's a definite need for it," he says. "Many people stricken or injured in the mountains, or other out-of-the-way places, die because medical care doesn't reach 'em quick enough."

The brown-eyed little captain is from Marlboro, Mass. He's a graduate of Dartmouth and of Johns Hopkins medical school who volunteered in the medical corps in 1917.

He is stationed at Great Falls, a member of the army's second force search and rescue unit.

"It's the only thing to it," the captain says. But...

A few hours after an army B-17 bomber, carrying 10 crewmen, crashed into barren Crown Peak in the "Half-Acre" country west of Fort Collins, Colo., last year, the doctor was flying to the rescue of injured survivors.

"Soon as we spied the crackup, I dropped my specially designed, 35-pound medical kit, consisting of equipment for treatment of shock, burns, fractures, lacerations and other emergencies."

"It landed within 25 feet of the mangled B-17—but my landing was not quite as good."

"I bailed out at 12,500 feet—about 1,000 feet above the craggy mountain top where the wreckage was. A wind carried me a couple blocks below the crash, and I thought I was a goner for a minute."

"As I approached the ground my chute snagged an old dead tree and I fell about 30 feet with that big tree right after me. It landed with a hell of a thud a few inches from my head."

"It took me four and a half hours to climb back up to the crash. Three of the men had been killed instantly. The tail gunner died shortly before I arrived."

"The three seriously injured men were treated and ready to be moved when ground parties arrived. There's really nothing to it," the captain asserts. "Sister than riding in a New York taxi."

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

HARRY: "I don't know what they'll weigh up, Judge, but my cattle and poultry sure have been getting fatter since I started to use distillers' dried grains in their ration."

OLD JUDGE: "You're about the tenth one to tell me that, Harry. How do you account for it?"

HARRY: "The by-product recovered from grains used by distillers is very high in vitamin and protein content. It's the best feed supplement we can get to balance the rations. Mixed with original grain, these distillers' dried grains have a much greater feeding value than the original grain has."

OLD JUDGE: "Have any trouble getting all you need?"

HARRY: "Yes, at times, even though the distillers produced 1,200,000 pounds of it for the year ending last June, I hope they'll be in a position to produce a lot more next year."

OLD JUDGE: "Then I guess nobody can tell you grain is wasted in distilling."

HARRY: "Not me, Judge... I know."

"HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR ELECTRIC BILL"

by Phineas Q. Twitch, Eminent Economist and Reddy Kilowatt, Your Electric Servant

Dr. Twitch: "Disconnect your electric doorbell. What if your callers do bruise their knuckles knocking? You'll save a penny's worth of electricity."

Reddy: "Admitted, Doctor, that a penny saved is a penny earned, so in only eleven years (at compound interest) you'll save enough to buy another door-bell for the back door so you can save twice as much by not using it!"

Dr. Twitch: "Sell your vacuum cleaner and beat your rugs by hand. The money you get for your old machine will buy several sturdy beaters and an ample supply of liniment."

Reddy: "Then, every time you beat ten large rugs, you'll save a whole penny's worth of electricity!"

Dr. Twitch: "You can easily do ten rugs in a couple of days, after you get used to it. And the exercise will build you up."

Reddy: "Yes—even if it does break down the rugs! And the more you beat 'em the more you save!
